Baltimore County Charter

WHEREAS, agriculture is a significant contributor to the economy, agricultural and environmental stewardship, public health, and quality of life in Baltimore County with disciplines encompassing all economic levels; and

WHEREAS, agriculture touches nearly every one of the Baltimore County Agencies, but often plays a secondary role within the decision-making of each agency; however, when considering the culminative value, agriculture plays a significant role in health, environmental sustainability, planning, natural resources, public works, recreation, social services, food access, food safety, environmental sustainability, emergency disaster relief, tourism, rural workforce and more; and

WHEREAS, agriculture is fragmented across numerous County Agencies, with no single dedicated leadership role to administer and understand the various programs, funding sources, and grants offered by local, State, and federal agencies at the Baltimore County Agricultural Center, resulting in duplication of services, delays in regulatory transparency, slower reviews of plans submitted to the Soil Conservation District, and underutilization of State and federal funds for County initiatives and emergency disasters; and

WHEREAS, it is essential to develop a more effective means of assuring that the agriculture sector of Baltimore County will be an integral part of the local decision-making process of Baltimore County Government; now therefore
